

To the very beautiful and intelligent members of the Literific (so not Morgan Hickman),

I am standing for Internal Convenor once again and here are the reasons you should vote for me rather than that egotist RON. Firstly my experience: I have been on Council for two years now and have been there now longer than anyone else currently standing for positions. I have, as the sharper of you might have noticed, been Internal Convenor already. I know what the role demands of me and what to do right in this role. To back this up I must add that one of the main jobs of the Internal Convenor is to write the term card and given this will be my 10th year in a row of being on a debating council and helping write debating motions, and given more time over summer to write motions and invite speakers, I can guarantee a great term card!

Secondly my passion for this Society: I love the Literific, I have been a consistent member for two years, I have been to many external competitions and proudly represented the Society, I have some of my closest friends here (SO Suzi's Bois) and I would love to see this brilliantly weird family gain more members and get the acknowledgement that it deserves and I will fight to get that.

This is all I could fit in 250 words but I hope come the 13th of March you will reelect me as your Internal Convener.
