

Hello everyone!

For those who don't know me, I am Inma, a student from Spain who was supposed to be here only for one year; but what can I say? I fell in love with the place and especially the people.

In my home university, I started debating when I was 18 (I'm almost 22 now) so when I found out that Queen's University had a debate society, I didn't have any doubt; and that family, The Literific, is one of the main reasons why I fell in love with the locals.

After all of this you should be wondering: "Okay but... what is this foreigner going to teach us?".

And there is where I stop you and I'll start with the three main reasons why I want to train the Literific great again:

Critical Thinking.

Debating is not about arguing with each other, it's about learning how to make a good argument and finding flaws.

Structure.

There are a lot of different ways and formulas for public speaking; non-verbal skills, the keys of a good presentation, and understanding the motions.

Experience.

I've had the fortune of being a debater and judge in different tournaments. I was selected to be the captain of a debate team that actually won, and I was Vice President of ADUSAL, the debate society that made me who I am.

I will stop there because this is not about bragging, so If you want to hear my proposals in more depth, come to the AGM!
