

This year I had the pleasure of being the Treasurer, where I was actively engaged in all aspects of society. I successfully acquired nearly £2,000 from the Queens Annual Fund, £600 from the SU Recurring Grant as well as working on title sponsorship and merchandise for the society. I singlehandedly organised the Christmas Dinner and took part in all external competitions including the Irish Times and Oxford IV.

I want one thing for my presidency: aura.

This year has been a major success, and I want to build off the hard work done to send the society into the stratosphere. We've built our presence up over this year through our exciting debates and presence on the debate circuit. I will facilitate the ideas of the Council, from external competitions and the Queens IV to having a diverse range of events from across arts, culture and politics to increasing the reach of our schools competition. Most importantly, as President, I promise to be great craic. The society is not only a debate society but also a social society. It's important to foster a welcoming and inclusive environment. I will do this by yapping to everybody and ensuring that as many people as possible make it to Spoons (and Boombox). I have also been a part of the Muriel Cambell Subcommittee, which aims to boost women voices within the society.

The Literific means so much to me and I hope you will support me on this journey.
