Hi, I'm Maeve and I'm running for Events Officer. I have greatly enjoyed attending Literific meetings and the additional events this year and want to continue the enjoyment for future members of Literific. I feel like there is plenty which could be additionally brought to Literific with development of this role.

While many LitTalks have taken place this year and I would continue to invite many speakers similar to those already attended this year, I would further invite and include a greater diversity of speakers, not only a variety of political members but other significant people who help shape this country. To broaden political knowledge and our debating skills, I am of the belief that a variety of people should be listened to.

I would also start working with the chair of the Muriel Sub-committee to collaborate on some LitTalks with influential women within today's society as this would be a perfect opportunity to begin diversifying the guest speakers who attend.

As I did not grow up here, I feel I am impartial to most political parties within Ireland and Northern Ireland so will happily and easily be able to achieve a greater diversity of speakers to attend.

This will help further Literific's reach and encourage external students to come to Literific and LitTalks

Furthermore, I would ensure that the Great Debates, as they are rightly named, continue being Great! I have a variety of ideas to both continue and enhance this format.

Vote Maeve for Events Officer!
