

VICE-PRESIDENCY MANIFESTO

E L I Z A B E T H N O B L E

Hello all, Elizabeth Noble here. It would be my great honour to be your Vice-President of the 178th session.

I am the current Vice-President of Queen's Book Club. My tenure has given me a firm understanding of what the position demands: unwavering reliability, a broad set of skills and strong communication abilities.

My reliability is evidenced by my consistent, active membership of the Literific. I have seldom missed a Thursday meeting. I have spoken in Chambers on numerous occasions, attended LitTalks and competed externally — such as at the Annual Cross Border debate, where I stepped in at the eleventh hour. This consistent prioritisation of the Literific is a prelude to how I would conduct myself as Vice-President: one that shows up when it counts.

This close familiarity with our format means I can readily deputise for the President, and having attended every chamber-style workshop, can deliver comprehensive feedback consistent with our Internal Convenor's guidance.

As a Vice-President, I have done it all: from booking venues to applying for TAFs, such varied expertise allows me to step in wherever needed. I also single-handedly organised our headline event in collaboration with a local author. As my Conversazione award affirmed, I am notorious for my battle-ready vocabulary. My year working as a legal assistant has primed me to communicate precisely and efficaciously, while teaching me how to put out unexpected fires.

It takes a village to run the Literific, and I'm prepared to do my part for a society that I love.

Sapere Aude,
